THE LANGUAGE OF LOVE.

In youth I tried to learn its many lessons,
Its puzzling [illegible]
I parsed its [illegible]
Whenever [illegible]

Its act[illegible]
Its [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] was a happy boy.

But I in my maturity discover
Love's language is no easy thing to learn:
In person 'tis as coy as any lover—
Possessive and imperative and stern.

Unless—ah, rare conjugation coined by Cupid!
You teach me by sweet methods of your own,
And I am taught that men are all things stupid
And that love speaks in silences alone!

A RIVER RACE.

It must have been early in the fifties that a wonderful steamboat race took place on the Missouri. The high water of 1844 brought many boats from the south, their owners gaining an impression that the Missouri became a veritable inland sea every spring. In 1844 chutes were abandoned and boats ran over farm and garden, through towns and across wooded patches, regardless of channel or landmark. It was this condition for one season that for 10 years afterward crowded the river with strange boats.

Early in the spring of one year the Henry K. Johnston and the Martha Aull came from southern waters to try their fortunes in the muddy stream of the Dakotahs. Both reached St. Louis at the same time. At the busy levee of the growing metropolis each vessel took on freight for the northwest. Owing to the large number of vessels out that spring, cargoes were in demand, but despite the brisk rivalry rates were maintained in accordance with the ethics of early steamboating.

It happened that the two boats dropped away from the wharf about the same time. The Aull, Henry Sorgenson master, was probably half an hour ahead of the Johnstone, Bristow master. It was late in the afternoon. Each boat was loaded with merchandise, and both cabins were filled, most of the passengers being men who were headed for the boundless west in search of fortune. There were, however, women on both boats.

The Aull steamed away briskly, and by midnight had turned from the broad Mississippi into the dark, turbulent waters of the "Big Muddy." It was only a few moments later that the Johnstone passed into her wake.

When daylight broke, the boats were in sight of each other, both steaming ahead steadily, with no apparent effort to show high speed. It appeared, however, that the Johnstone was the faster boat. By noon the vessels passed St. Charles, within hailing distance of each other.

The passengers of each vessel sat on deck and watched the other boat pushing through the water but a few rods away. The crews, too, eyed the boats from their respective forecastles, commencing on the good steamer. It was [illegible] on the [illegible] se[illegible] sho[illegible] driven the day. A young fellow on the Aull called to a passenger on the Johnstone:

"Tell your captain that we can leave him so far behind before sunset that he can't see our smoke."

This taunt was at once conveyed to Bristow, who appeared at the rail and shouted a response.

"And you can tell your man," said he, "that he can burn every side of bacon in his hold and not get a bend between us."

Then Captain Sorgenson came to the front for a word.

"The Aull did not come into these waters to race any," said he, "but if you want to see what sort of a boat she is—why, I guess we'll have to accommodate you."

A shout went up from the Aull's passengers, drowning the reply that Captain Bristow made. As he concluded, however, he waved his hand to the mate below, who sang out, "Aye, aye, sir," with the air of an old salt and ran back toward the boilers. In three minutes the light smoke that came from the Aull's stack had changed to a rushing volume of coal black, streaming a quarter of a mile astern, seemingly dipping into the dark brown water of the river. Five minutes from the closing of the little speechmaking the Aull's engines began to move more rapidly. Then the blunt nose of the vessel crawled through the water faster and faster, until the wheelhouse of the boat was abreast the jackstaff on the Johnstone. A passenger on the Aull shouted:

"Better poke your fires up, or they'll go plumb out."

Bristow was not at the rail to respond. He was in the cabin in consultation with a number of the passengers.

"Well, what do you say, men?" he was asking.

"Do it!" shouted a stout youth of 22. "Would you let that stumpy scow beat us to St. Joe?"

"It's a matter of business," said the captain. "If she gets there first, my passengers will not have the pick of lodgings and outfits."

"That's the thing," observed the young man.

"I reckon you're right," said another of the party. Then another agreed, until finally the captain was satisfied that his most prominent passengers favored a test of speed.

"All right," said he. "We'll find out who's got the best bottom on this part of the river, and it won't take as long either!"

Captain Bristow went below. His passengers gathered at the rail and watched the Aull as she steamed evenly and rapidly ahead. The cook house of the speedy boat, well astern, was now opposite the Johnstone's jackstaff, and each second put the prows of the vessels farther apart. It was a good piece of river in which the boats were running. The bends were few and not severe. The water was deep and straight in the channel. The Aull's passengers crowded to the hurricane deck and stood far astern, shouting taunts at the sleepy looking Johnstone.

That was the state of affairs. Then the Johnstone's pilot pressed his foot on the whistle valve. A great white cloud of steam enveloped the top of the pilothouse, and then a shrill whistle sounded, the first of a chime. The others broke in with it 10 seconds later, until all of the bunch of whistles on the Johnstone's pilothouse were shouting musical defiance to the Aull. Music, indeed, came from the throats of those steamboat whistles. Whether from near or far, the whistles' chime always seemed to tell of calm, clear evenings, moonlit waters, soft music, the singing of plantation melody and the whisper of love.

With the Johnstone's whistle there came a stronger throb of the boat's heavy engines. With each vibration the hearts of the passengers and crew beat faster. There was a hurrying of feet—a silence of voices. The race was on.

Throughout the afternoon both boats fairly flew along. It was plain to be seen that the Aull was working all of the steam that her boilers could raise. She had "a bone in her teeth," so sharply did her nose cut the water. A great line of yellow foam stretched away from either side of her prow. The Johnstone was cutting the water almost as fiercely, but her hull was shaped differently from that of her rival, and for that reason her effective work was not so apparent.

The Aull maintained the slight lead that she had gained at the outset, but Captain Bristow did not appear alarmed over it. He coolly ordered his men about and had the fuel sorted so as to have the best material ready for an emergency. Through the narrow chute by Catfish island, around Bonhommie, by Cottleville without stopping, and through Ward's Hollow the boats raced, sometimes being forced almost to the grazing point by the narrowness of the channel.

Twilight found but little change in the relative positions of the boats. If there was any difference, the Aull had gained a few feet.

The river was badly divided below Augusta, and as a measure of safety the engineers lessened the speed of their boats until the dangerous point was passed. When it was deemed advisable to again push forward, the night was well on. The moon was full, giving the pilots a splendid opportunity for good work. Its yellow radiance made a river of gold of the turbid torrent. No one slept until midnight, when a few of the passengers slipped off to take a nap.

On the Aull there was among the lady passengers Miss Letitia Bernard, a handsome young woman from St. Louis. She announced that she would remain awake until the Aull won the race or had hopelessly lost. Half a dozen men gallantly agreed to sit it out with her, and together the party roamed the moonlit decks or visited the engine room and firemen's quarters to encourage the grimy workers to harder endeavor.

"I will give you $100 to win this race," Miss Bernard said to the engineer.

"And the same to you," she cried, addressing the sooty faced head stoker.

"We'll try, ma'am," the men answered, for money in those days was as glittering as it is today.

The morning found the Aull 100 yards ahead of the Johnstone.

"We're beat, cap," said a rough trader, addressing Bristow.

"No, we're not," returned the captain. "I'm running this end of the race, and depend on me to run it right."

All day the boats sped along, and each hour the Aull gained a trifle. Another evening found the sky again clear—a perfect night for racing on the river. Not a breath of air stirred. The stillness was only broken by the regular deep toned throb of the engines as the boats cut through the water. Washington, Portland, Jefferson City—the little state capital high on the bluffs—all had been passed in the afternoon with a whistle that brought the inhabitants out to see the speeding boats.

Soon after passing Jefferson Captain Bristow called the passengers on deck.

"What I want to say, friends," he began, "is this: We'll be in good water before very long—a narrow river with a deep channel and a rock bottom. It's the best water in the river. Now, we can beat that boat ahead of us easy enough with one thing. It will take some grease. If I can buy a few 'sides' of meat from the cargo we can go ahead."

A St. Louis trader was on board with several hundred "sides." He stepped forward in an instant. "You shall have 'em, cap," he said, "and for nothin."

It was a right jolly cheer that went up. Bristow hardly bowed his thanks, so hurriedly did he get away from the cabin and go below.

"Turn the boys loose, Jim," he yelled to the engineer, and before his words had died away across the water the choicest of inflammable materials was being rammed into the yawning furnaces. The hand on the steam gauge crawled up slowly, and as it advanced the engineer opened the valves wider. The increased speed was noted at once. So close together did the throbs of the engine come that they appeared like a steady vibration. In 20 minutes the Aull was so close that her every outline was clearly visible in the brilliant moonlight. Her captain saw that the Johnstone was gaining rapidly, and the great volume of sparks that poured from her stacks in a roll of inky smoke told that Sorgensen meant to keep ahead if the lavish expenditure of fuel would do it.

The Johnstone gained steadily. In two hours the boats were abreast, 10 yards apart. The Swedish captain of the Aull could be heard shouting his orders to the men. He was everywhere. One moment he would be telling the engineer what to do, the next would find him directing the placing of fuel; at another he would have his hand on the wheel in the pilothouse in an endeavor to make a short cut in the river.

The lights from the furnaces of both boats gleamed on the surface of the water, rivaling the moon's brilliant rays. The passengers on each of the boats could hear the others as they talked excitedly of the race. The noses of the boats were exactly together as they entered the long and beautiful stretch of river just below Rochefort. On the right, a rocky wall, covered with clinging ivy, rose to a height of 100 feet. Over it the full moon beamed, but the shadow of the great bluff extended across to the other side of the stream. Into this narrow, deep, black river the boats plunged like things of life. The Johnstone had a little advantage, and not a side of meat had been used.

"Pile on the bacon, boys!" Bristow shouted, and with a yell the grease was hurried into the furnaces. The Aull's captain felt that he was beaten. He had used the best of his fuel early in the race.

"Pile her on, boys!" shouted Bristow. "Keep her hot!"

Inch by inch the Johnstone moved ahead.

"There's butter on board!" cried Miss Bernard. "Burn it, and I'll pay. The Aull must win."

So butter in casks and baskets was smeared over sticks of wood and fed to the greedy flames to the boat's furnaces. Her engines responded, too, for the slight gain that Johnstone had accomplished was soon overcome, and the Aull passed the other boat. Bristow shouted orders, and the measured "choo, choo" of the exhaust pipes became hoarser than ever. It was neck and neck. Then the Johnstone began to gain again.

There was a bend ahead, where the bluff broke for a few feet, only to rise higher than even a dozen yards beyond. For this bend the boats worked. The thing was to reach it first. Bristow, with his own hands, piled the meat into his furnaces until the Johnstone again passed the Aull. It was something akin to a curse that Sorgenson uttered when he found the last of his choice fuel spent.

On, on sped the Johnstone. It was 10 yards ahead and gaining! More food for the flames! Twenty yards and at the bend first!

A mighty shout went up from the Johnstone's decks when the boat rounded, so that the Aull could not be seen. It was soon visible again, however, but the Johnstone was gaining each minute of the time. In half an hour it was 50 yards ahead. In another hour it had rounded another bend, and the race was won. It had a start that the Aull could not overcome.

Just after midnight the lights at Rocheport landing were sighted. The passengers were still on deck talking of the race. A pall of black smoke hung half a mile back from the Johnstone's stacks, and only by bending the ear could one catch the faint, measured thrum, thrum, thrum of the Aull's engines far back on the moonlit river.—Detroit Free Press.

The Temperature of the Blood.

One singular property of all animal bodies is that of maintaining within themselves an equable temperature. The blood of the arctic explorer remains at a normal temperature though he breathes air that will freeze mercury, and in India, where the temperature of the air is 115 to 120 above zero, the temperature of the blood is still 98 degrees Fahrenheit.—Exchange.

Death on a Cricket Field.

An extraordinary incident took place on a cricket ground near Manchester. A youth was pushing behind a horse roller, which was run over the pitch between the innings of a match, when by some means he was carried around by the roller, which passed over him and instantly crushed him to death.—Whole Family.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent)

Both Senate and House are in a state of suppressed excitement. In the Senate the fight over the Voorhees repeal bill has reached the nervous stage. The attendance is unusually large on both sides and it is evident to even the most careless observer that the Senators are in a state of expectation. The crisis may be on at any moment and they all know it. President Cleveland is taking a personal hand in the fight, and the silver men claim that it is helping, instead of hurting them. Mr. Cleveland has been so accustomed to having his own way that he is in a state of mind because a majority of the Democratic Senators refuse to see the silver question as he sees it, and it is said that some warm words were spoken on both sides this week when several of those Senators attempted to get his consent to some compromise in the shape of an amendment recognizing silver. The nature of Mr Cleveland's answer may be judged from the laughing remarks of one of the Senators who called on him: "I'll bet that Cleveland railed at Providence for having sent him a girl baby when he wanted a boy."

In the House the excitement is caused by the Tucker bill for the repeal of all laws providing for federal supervision of Presidential and Congressional elections, which has been reported to the House, and which, according to the present programme, is to be pushed to a vote, although there are a number of Democrats who openly question the wisdom of bringing it to the front at this time. That it will provoke a long and bitter partisan debate is certain, and it may play an important part in the silver contest, as drawing the party lines rigidly in one thing, and stirring up sleeping party prejudices may result in drawing the party lines in everything. Already there are rumors of a combine for the defeat of Peffer and the Voorhees repeal bill.

If the object of assembling the representatives of numerous Boards of Trade in the larger cities in convention at Washington this week was to influence the Senators on the silver question, and of that there is little doubt, a mistake was made. If the convention has had any influence at all it has been directly opposite to what its projectors intended. Your correspondent heard a Senator who favors the Voorhees repeal bill say that the coming of these board of trade men and their action in favor the Voorhees bill confirmed in the minds of the people the statement so often made by the silver men that it is only the moneyed men of the country who are demanding the passage of the Voorhees bill. The convention certainly had no effect upon the silver Senators, because they knew long ago that as a rule the Boards of Trade of the country were strongly anti-silver, so that the expense—somebody had to put up the cash for railroad fare and hotel bills—of bringing these men to Washington was worse than wasted, so far as the Senate is concerned.

There are men in the Senate who make use of all the tricks of oratory to add effect to the points made in their speeches, but Senator Teller of Colorado is not one of them. On the contrary he is a man whose speeches as a rule are made in plain conversational style, just as though he were talking to an individual. It may be surmised then that when Mr. Teller became the chief actor, in fact the only actor, in the most dramatic scene of the session it had great effect upon his colleagues, who whether they agree with him or not, recognize the honesty of his convictions. Mr. Teller had just had a little controversary with Senator Hawley of Connecticut over silver and was portraying in plain language the suffering which he believed would be entailed upon the people he represents if the Voorhees bill became a law when suddenly his voice became pathetic and tears began to stream down his face; then he broke down completely and falling into his chair dropped his head between his hands and for a few moments his frame was shaken with such emotion as man feels but a few times in his life. Although only lasting a few seconds it was a scene that will never be forgotten by any one who was present, and more than one Senator bowed his head and surreptitiously wiped his moistened eyes.

The Chinese question is all to be gone over again in Congsess, it having been decided by the administration that a substitute for the Geary law must be adopted. A bill embodying the ideas of the administration, which was prepared by Mr. Quincy, who has just resigned the position of Assistant Secretary of State, it is said, under Mr. Cleveland's direction, and which was introduced by Representative Everett of Massachusetts is now in the hands of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, and although Mr. Geary, who is a member of that committee, does not like the bill, it will probably be reported to the House without material change.

HEART DISEASE 30 YEARS.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 8th, 1892.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I had been troubled with HEART DISEASE FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS, and although I was treated by nine physicians and tried many remedies, I grew steadily worse until I WAS COMPLETELY PROSTRATED AND CONFINED TO MY BED WITHOUT ANY HOPE OF RECOVERY. I would have very bad sinking spells, when my pulse would stop beating altogether, and it was with the greatest difficulty that my circulation could be started, which would then bring me back to consciousness again. While in this condition I tried your NEW HEART CURE, and began to improve from the first, and now I am able to do a good day's work for a man 68 years of age. I give DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE all the credit for my recovery. It is over six months since I have taken any, although I keep a bottle in the house in case I should need it. I have also used your NERVE AND LIVER PILLS, and think a great deal of them. Z. AVERY.

To Taxpayers

The City Clerk, having apportioned the City Tax of 10 cents upon each one hundred dollars assessable property, as levied by the Board of Trustees, and delivered the assessment roll to the undersigned Tax Collector:

Notice is hereby given, that the taxes of Sonoma City for the year 1893 on all personal property and one half of the taxes on real property will be due and payable on the 1st Monday of October, and will be delinquent on the 3rd Monday of November next thereafter at 6 o'clock P. M., and that unless paid prior thereto fifteen per cent will be added to the amount thereof and that if said one-half be not paid before the 1st Monday in February next at 6 o'clock P. M., an additional five per cent will be added thereto.

That the remaining one half of the taxes on all real property will be payable on and after the 1st Monday of January next, and will become delinquent on the 1st Monday in February thereafter at 6 o'clock P. M., and that unless paid prior thereto, five per cent will be added to the amount thereof, and that liens will attach after the 1st Monday in March at 6 o'clock P. M. when suit will be instituted in the proper Court for the collection of all delinquent taxes, costs and charges. That all the taxes may be paid at the time when the first instalment is due and payable, and as the tax levy for this year is so exceptionally small, it is hoped that taxpayers will pay the whole of their tax at one time.

I shall be at the Pavilion on Saturdays during business hours to receive said tax and receipt therefor.

Sonoma Valley visitors to Santa Rosa should not forget to go to Leary's restaurant and oyster house on Fourth street, four doors below the Athenæum, for their meals. This is the only first-class restaurant in that city, and the proprietor will pay special attention to Sonoma Valley guests. A better meal for 25 cents can be had at the above resort than can be had at the principal hotels for twice that sum.

Miss Nettie Goess entertained a number of her little girl friends last Sunday afternoon in honor of the 12th anniversary of her birthday. The afternoon passed pleasantly in the playing of games, listening to vocal and instrumental music and partaking of choice refreshments. All those present had a most enjoyable time. Miss Nettie received several handsome presents among which was a beautiful doll.

Johnnie Rogers and a party of the Olympic Club wheelmen came up on their wheels from San Rafael last Sunday. While here they were the guests of Col. and Mrs. W. K. Rogers, who entertained them with a fine dinner. In the afternoon the wheelmen visited Sonoma, where they were received by George Brietenbach and Carrol Prunty, members of the Bicycle Club of this place. After a few runs around the Plaza the party proceeded to the Donahue railway depot, where they took the south bound train for San Francisco.

The case of the People vs. Chas. Hanks, arrested last Sunday morning on complaint of Maurie Haraszthy, who charged him with purloining his go-cart, was dismissed in Judge Cheney's Court on Monday. It appeared there was a misunderstanding between the parties. Hanks claimed he had borrowed the go-cart from Haraszthy, while the latter was equally positive that he had refused Hanks the loan of the cart. At any rate no theft was intended from a moral standpoint, but in the eyes of the law the taking of property belonging to another without the owner's permission is a crime, hence the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of young Hanks.

A Midnight Visitor.

On Monday night last a burglar entered the residence of Judge J. M. Cheney and stole a silver watch and chain. The time piece, together with a pistol, was lying on a small table alongside the Judge's bed. The burglar, no doubt, became alarmed just as he picked up the watch and hastily left the bed room without a further search for valuables. The presence of the midnight visitor was not discovered until the next morning, when his visit was made known by the loss of the watch and an unlocked door. Had Mr. Cheney possessed a faithful watch dog it is needless to add that it would have been impossible for a burglar to have gained access to his sleeping apartment without an alarm being given by the dumb brute. Moral: If you wish to avoid being robbed or murdered by a burglar or having your house burned over your head by a midnight incendiary don't fail to have on your premises that most faithful of all friends—an intelligent dog.

Another Artesian Well.

A fine flowing artesian well was struck by well-borers on G. Caminati's place, near the railway depot, one day last week. This makes six flowing artesian wells that have been developed in this place the past few years. So far this artesian water is allowed to go to waste, if we except a few gallons that are utilized for domestic purposes. The combined capacity of these six wells will reach between 2,000,000 3,000,000 gallons per 24 hours. If these artesian wells were in any other town beside Sonoma they would be put to some practical use and made to earn the owners a handsome revenue. At the present time, however, this place enjoys the distinction of having the largest number of fine flowing artesian wells and one of the poorest water systems of any incorporated town in the State.

A Sad Case of Insanity

A poor demented woman, recently discharged from the Napa Insane Asylum, with a two-month's old babe in her arms, has been roaming the streets of Sonoma by day and by night for several weeks past. Already the poor creature has invaded several private houses at a late hour and by her moaning and crying has frightened a number of ladies and children. For the sake of humanity if for nothing else something should be done by our officials to keep the woman and her babe off the streets, and if this cannot be done she should be recommitted to Napa. The attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children is also called to this matter.

Incendiary Fire.

On Friday night of last week at 11 o'clock a barn on the farm of G. Proletti, five miles east of this place on the Napa road, was completely destroyed by fire. In the barn were two horses, ten tons of hay and several sets of harness, all of which were devoured by the flames. The fire broke out during the absence of Mr. Proletti, who was in Sonoma attending a meeting of the Druid Society of which he is a member. The fire was no doubt the work of a tramp incendiary. There was $200 insurance on the property. Loss about $1000.

Have a Caution.

The person who is very foolishly acting as the Sonoma correspondent for a disreputible sheet in San Francisco should go slow, as he is treading on very dangerous ground. Already he has dragged into public notice several very estimable young ladies of this place. Should the author become known to the friends and relatives of the young ladies in question it may go hard with him. Take our advice and cease your squibbling to the objectionable sheet If it is continued something very serious is apt to happen.

Petrified Mushrooms.

Last week while driving through the hills near Sonoma, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenot found several petrified mushrooms. They are very perfecet in formation. They are only a few of the wonders to be found in the hills surrounding this pretty valley. Mr. Stevenot has sent one to the Academy of Sciences and another he will present to the Sonoma High School, where it will be placed in the cabinet for the benefit of the pupils.

The San Leandro Standard has been enlarged to a 52-column paper. The Standard is now the largest paper published in Alameda county. Its editor is Weston P. Truesdell, a talented and versatile young man, who has recently composed the "Donner Lake Gallop," a beautiful instrumental piece of music. The San Leandro people should be proud of the Standard and its brilliant young editor.

Considerable lumber has been hauled to the iron bridge at this place and some needed improvements will be made thereon.

REMINGTON.

Glen Ellen, Sept. 14th, 1893.

Prevailing Diseases.

Dr. J. R. Laine, Secretary of the State Board of Health, in his report for the month of August says: Reports of prevailing diseases from seventy towns, villages, and sanitary districts outside of the larger cities, give twenty-six cases of pneumonia, eighty-four of bronchitis, thirty-four of pleuritis, seven of congestion of the lungs, one hundred and sixty-four of diarrhœa, ninety-one of dysentery, fifty-seven of cholera morbus, sixty-seven of cholera infantum, twenty- eight of diphtheria, three of croup, twenty-two of scarlatina, thirty-one of measles, thirty-eight of whooping-cough, twenty-five of la grippe, one hundred and two of typhoid fever, three hundred and five of malarial fevers, seven of cerebro-spinal fever, thirty-eight of erysipelas, one hundred and ten of rheumatism, sixty-eight of neuralgia, eighty-six of tonsilitis and thirty-eight of pharyngitis. The entire State is in a healthy condition, and public sentiment seems to be in favor of public cleanliness, which leads to public health. This is manifested in movements by municipalities toward the construction of much need systems of sewers, the erection of garbage crematories, and the procurement of better water supplies.

Resolutions of Thanks.

At the last regular business meeting of the Sonoma Turn Verein, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Sonoma Turn Verein be extended to the Misses Pauline Bates, Stella Johnson and Claire Hope and to Hon. Fred. T. Duhring, Jas. B. Small and John Wilson, for volunteering their services on the occasion of our recent entertainment.

Resolved, That these resolutions be placed upon our minutes and published in the Sonoma INDEX-TRIBUNE.

Died—In San Francisco, September 21st, James Wm. King, aged 24 years 4 months and 3 days. The deceased was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. King, who reside near this place. He had been for a long time in a very delicate state of health and although he occasionally recruited strength his relatives have for a considerable period felt great alarm for the fatal event which they all now so deeply deplore. Willie, as he was familiarly called, was highly respected by all who knew him for his dignified and gentlemanly deportment and moral standing. Few young men have descended to the grave with stronger claims to the respect of all who had known them in this life. The family have our deepest sympathy in this, their day of affliction. But we believe in a glorious hereafter and know that the beloved ones who have gone before are only waiting to give a welcome. Gowns of pure white are fashionable with but little relief in the shape of a waist band and high collar of some bright becoming color, such as contrasts harmoniously with white.

Sam Lewis, the well-known engineer of the Donahue road, left last Tuesday morning for the East. Before returning home he will visit the World's Fair and other places of interest.

A COMPLETE SURPRISE.

We have seldom, if ever, been called upon to report a more complete or enjoyable surprise party than that which was given by the young friends of Miss Katie McDonell in honor of her 19th birthday on Friday evening of last week. It is quite impossible to convey an idea of the mirth and festivity which reigned triumphant throughout the evening. Promptly at 8 o'clock those who had been invited assembled at the residence of Miss Pauline Bates on Napa street and shortly after the party, chaperoned by Mrs. E. K. Stevenot and Mrs. R. J. Keogh proceeded to Miss McDonell's residence on Broadway. Not finding the young lady at home the young surprisers secreted themselves on the premises and quickly dispatched a messenger in quest of her. She was soon found and upon being told that a lady friend wished to see her at home she hastily returned, when to her great surprise she was met by about twenty-two of her young friends. Soon after entering the house dancing and the playing of games commenced, which were kept up until refreshments were served, consisting of a great variety of edibles. After partaking of the good things offered the amusements of the evening continued until midnight when the young people separated, highly gratified that they had the pleasure of enjoying a genuine surprise party. The following were those present: Mrs. R. J. Keogh, Mrs. E. K. Stevenot, Misses Katie McDonell, Maggie Stevenot, Pauline Bates, Zoe Clark, Mamie Stevenot, Bertha Campbell, Clara Cheney, Claire Hope, Birdie Johnson. Messrs. Lathrop Dunn, Henry Bates, Wm. Wyatt, Walter Caldwell, Eugene Donaldson, Claude Johnson, John McDonell, Ranald McDonell, Chas. Cheney, Freddie Stevenot, Harry Thorn.

C. Aguillon returned from a visit to the metropolis Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burns visited relatives in Embarcadero the past week.

R. B. St. Clair went to Santa Rosa to attend to business last Monday.

Mrs. C. W. Engelbert returned from a pleasant visit with San Francisco friends last Monday.

A party of young folks drove out last Wednesday evening to the residence of Miss Mamie Church in the southeastern suburbs of town, where they were delightfully entertained throughout the evening by the young lady. The following were those present: Misses Mamie Church, Clara Cheney, Jennie Gaines, Maggie Church, Eva Church, Pauline Bates, Jennie Gawn, Helena Church. Messrs. Claude Johnson, Eugene Donaldson, Walter Caldwell, Joe. McMullen, Wm. Wyatt, John Sontag.

Miss Annie Pemberton is in Massachusetts, whither she was called a few weeks ago to the bedside of her grandmother, who is not expected to live.

The Misses Ward and Master Shirley Ward of San Francisco gave a party last Tuesday afternoon at the home of their friend Miss Murphy of El Verano. The afternoon was spent in dancing, singing and playing games, after which a bounteous repast was served. After the party the guests were taken for a long drive through the valley. Those present were the following: The Misses Irene and Mildred Ward of San Francisco, Emma Redmond, Bertie Weaver, Dawn Weaver, Gertie Murphy, Camilla Redmond, Mrs. Horace Jones and Miss Shea of San Francisco. Messrs. Shirley Ward, Carl Weaver, Irvin Redmond, Bert Jones, George Weaver, Robert Monroe of Oakland, Howard Redmond, Harold Redmond, and Mr. Neat of San Francisco.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, SEPT. 23, 1893.

How is This?

Something unique even in these days of mammoth premium offers, it is the latest effort of Stafford's Magazine, a New York monthly of home and general reading.

The proposition is to send the Magazine one year for one dollar, the regular subscription price; and in addition to send each subscriber fifty-two complete novels during the twelve months: one each week.

Think of it. You receive a new and complete novel, by mail, post paid, every week for fifty-two weeks, and in addition you get the magazine once a month, for twelve months, all for one dollar. It is an offer which the publishers can only afford to make in the confident expectations of getting a hundred thousand new subscribers. Among the authors in the coming series are, Wilkie Collins, Walter Besant, Mrs. Oliphant, Mary Cecil Hay, Florence Marryat, Anthony Trollope, A. Conan Doyle, Miss Braddon, Captain Marryat, Miss Thackery and Jules Verne. If you wish to take advantage of this unusual opportunity, send one dollar for Stafford's Magazine, one year. Your first copy of the magazine and your first number of the fifty-two novels (one each week) which you are to receive during the year will be sent you by return mail. Remit by P. O. FORTY DOLLARS SAVED THE BANK.

An Ingenious Scheme That Restored Confidence to Depositors.

Old timers tell the story how T. J. Kelley, a contractor of this city and now manager of the horse market in Grand avenue, by a very clever ruse stopped a run on a bank and prevented its going to the wall way back in 1871. At that time the Kansas City Savings association, now the National Bank of Commerce, was located at the southwest corner of Fourth and Delaware streets. Mr. Kelley was then secretary and cashier of the Corrigan Street Railway company, and the company's account was kept at this bank.

The much despised penny was not then in general use here as now. People were ashamed to pay for any article with pennies, except perhaps postage stamps, and the old fashioned "fare box" in the cars became a dumping ground for them. From $3 to $5 in pennies would be found in the boxes by Mr. Kelley every day. He usually dumped them in sacks and stored them away in the company's vault.

During the crisis of 1871 the people became very much excited and flocked to the banks in droves to withdraw their deposits. Runs were made on nearly all the banks in the city, and several were forced to suspend. One day a run was made upon the Kansas City Savings bank, and the people were lined up waiting their turn to reach the tellers, who were paying out money by the basketful, when a happy thought struck Mr. Kelley. He went to the police station, secured three policemen to guard his treasure, loaded eight sacks of coppers upon a wheelbarrow and took them down to the bank. The sacks had originally contained gold and were labeled on the outside "$5,000" in great big black letters.

Arriving at the bank, one old colored woman who had come to withdraw her small savings called out, "Why, Mistah Kelley, wha' fo' yo' put all that money in here when we'se a-drawin our money out?"

Kelley replied: "That's all right. This bank isn't going to bust. I can put more money in here in one day than all you people can draw out in six months," as he trudged into the bank with the last sack.

This display of confidence on the part of the street railway company had a quieting effect upon the crowd, and they rapidly dwindled away.

The sacks contained just $40, but it saved the bank.—Kansas City Journal.

A Talk With an Elephant Hunter.

Mr. Selons is full of elephant stories. He has killed over a hundred of these monstrous pachyderms. He says that although they smell a man quickly they do not discern him well with their eyes. If he stands quite motionless, the odds are they will mistake him for a tree or stump and leave him alone. African elephants stand about 10 feet high, and their tusks weigh from 30 to 70 pounds each. The most edible part of the elephant is its heart, after that its foot and its trunk.

The elephant is a natural reservoir of fat, and out of his cavernous interior the natives carefully excavate every particle of tallow as soon as he is disemboweled. As they bathe in his blood and allow it to dry on their bodies they are not very desirable companions. The elephant when wounded goes on and on until he drops; hence it is seldom any use following up the trail of any but a very badly wounded beast. When very hot, they insert their trunks in their stomachs, draw up the water and sprinkle it over their backs, preferring apparently to have the moisture outside rather than inside. The natives eat all the elephant to the bare bones if they can keep the carcass from the lions and the hyenas. —W. T. Stead in Review of Reviews.

Pre-eminence of the Bean.

Beans are more nutritious than meat, and it is likely that at no distant day science will devise some method of preparing them as food that will overcome what is now the greatest obstacle to their universal use, the difficulty with which they are digested by persons either not of robust stomachs or sedentary in habit. It is not at all unlikely that with the growth of population and the consequent increase in the cost of animal food they will take the place of the latter to a considerable extent. They are exceedingly rich in portein, or muscle building substance, and therefore have a power of sustaining men through arduous physical toil. The lumbermen of Maine, it is said, almost live on baked beans and never tire of them. —Boston Herald.

Games of Cards.

Games of cards have been the rage, have declined in popular favor, have faded into virtual extinction and have been suddenly revived over and over again. Lansquenet, piquet, vingt et un, ecarte, triumph, prime, flux, matrimony, basset, boston, spadille, manille and basto, together with ombre, which was only an ancient form of whist, with many more games than even the voluminous Hoyle dreamed of, succeeded one another in society, and by turns enjoyed their epoch of patronage, but the cards themselves have scarcely changed pictorially for more than 200 years.—London Telegraph.

A Story of a Russian Novelist.

Turgenieff once asked the famous critic, Belinsky, and five others to dine with him at his home in the country, where he kept a famous chef.

"I will prepare such a banquet for you as you have never imagined," he declared, and he not only fixed the day, but insisted upon each person's giving his word of honor that he would be present.

"Don't fear for us," said Belinsky. "We shall be there, but you must not repeat the trick you played us last winter, when you asked us to dine and were not at home when we arrived. In order to remind you I will write to you the day before."

On the appointed day—a very hot day—the party set out for the country house in the morning and arrived thoroughly fatigued by heat and dust. But no host appeared to welcome them. The house was deserted. Repeated knocking at the door was answered by silence.

"Can Turgenieff have repeated last winter's trick?" exclaimed Belinsky. His friends tried to persuade him that they had arrived earlier than they were expected.

"But I wrote him that we would be here at 1 o'clock," said Belinsky. "What can it mean? If they would only admit us, we could wait, but here we are scorched!"

At length a boy appeared who confessed that his master was away and that the chef was at an inn in the neighborhood. He was dispatched for the chef, and the party waited, hungry and cross, until he made his appearance.

"Where is your master?" cried Belinsky.

The cook did not know.

"Did he not order a dinner for us today?"

"He did nothing of the kind," was the answer.

"Well," said Belinsky when he was composed enough to express an opinion, "he has indeed given us an unusual sort of banquet!"—"Russian Characteristics."

Teeth of the Beaver.

The beaver is armed with two long chisellike teeth in each jaw. These teeth are exceedingly powerful and are to a beaver what an ax is to a woodsman. One such tooth taken from the lower jaw of a medium sized skull (they can be removed without difficulty, unlike the most of ours) is bent into nearly a semicircle and measures 5 inches along its outer curve. Only one inch of this length projects from the skull. The corresponding one from the upper jaw is bent into more than a complete half circle and measures upon its outer face 4 inches, of which less than an inch protrudes from its bone casing. In width each tooth is five-eighths of an inch. Examination of one of them reveals the secret of how a beaver can perform such feats as chopping down a birch tree 16 inches in diameter, not to speak of softer woods, like the basswood, of much greater size.

The tooth is composed of two materials. Along the outer face or front of the tooth is a thin plate of exceedingly hard enamel. On the inner, forming the body of the tooth, is a substance called dentine. The dentine, being softer, wears away with use. The thin enamel remains comparatively unworn, so that the tooth assumes the shape of a keen chisel that never grows dull. The tooth is hollow at the base for half its length and is filled with a nourishing substance which keeps it constantly growing.—St Nicholas.

Mr. Ferguson's Saving Prayer.

Away back in the early sixties Mr. Ferguson was defending a man accused of beating his wife. The case was on trial before a justice of the peace, probably the same justice who decided that stealing a sack of potatoes out of a canoe was "piracy on the high seas." The accused was convicted, and the justice promptly sentenced him to be hanged.

"But you can't hang a man for beating his wife," expostulated Ferguson.

"The devil I can't," said the justice, bridling up. "Ain't he guilty? Oughtn't any man to be hung who would beat a woman and that woman his wife? And ain't I the only judge in this county? If I haven't got the power to hang a man, who has, eh? I'll hang him within an hour; won't we, boys?" he concluded, addressing the crowd standing around, whose sympathies were evidently with the woman.

"That we will," shouted the crowd.

Seeing that the case was beginning to look serious for his client, Ferguson said:

"Well, your honor, before the man is hanged I'd like to take him out behind that big tree and pray with him."

"All right," said the justice, and off went the prisoner and Ferguson. When they got behind the tree Ferguson said in an undertone:

"Now git, you hound." And he got.—Seattle Press-Times.

"August Flower"

I had been troubled five months with Dyspepsia. The doctors told me it was chronic. I had a fullness after eating and a heavy load in the pit of my stomach. I suffered frequently from a Water Brash of clear matter. Sometimes a deathly Sickness at the Stomach would overtake me. Then again I would have the terrible pains of Wind Colic. At such times I would try to belch and could not. I was working then for Thomas McHenry, Druggist, Cor. Irwin and Western Ave., Allegheny City, Pa., in whose employ I had been for seven years. Finally I used August Flower, and after using just one bottle for two weeks, was entirely relieved of all the trouble. I can now eat things I dared not touch before. I would like to refer you to Mr. McHenry, for whom I worked, who knows all about my condition, and from whom I bought the medicine. I live with my wife and family at 39 James St., Allegheny City, Pa. My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion, and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would act violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed, otherwise her body would cramp and be so for two hours. She took but two bottles of the Nerve Tonic, which cured her entirely of all these torments, which myself and wife gladly testify it truly had the desired effect. D. S. M'GILLIS.

We have received hundreds of testimonials from pleased patrons during the past five years: "I had beautiful flowers from the seeds you sent me two years ago, and from experience know the seeds are exactly as advertised."—Mrs. N. C. Bayum, Dana, Wis. "Myself and friends have sent for various things advertised by you, and have found them to be entirely satisfactory."—M. J. Davis, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Henry Wood Beecher (a regular subscriber), and Grace Greenwood, each ordered our seeds last season. Do not confound this offer with the catchpenny schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents.
SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady sending us 15 cents for above offer, and naming the paper in which she saw this advertisement, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one packet of the celebrated Eckford Sweet Peas, embracing the newest varieties, including Recreation, Ina Eckford, Splendor, The Queen, Orange Prince, Apple Blossom, etc. Sweet Peas are the most popular and fashionable bouquet flowers now cultivated, and the Eckford Varieties which we offer, are the largest, finest and most celebrated known.
